TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1897.

A member of the New York State Government at Albany, a Democrat, tells the World that Mr. Cleveland is not as strong with the Democrats in that State as he was when he was elected, and that what he had lost Mr. Blaine had gained.

The people of Patrick County, Va., came together the other day in mass-meeting and esoived that they favored a protective tariff and that they were entitled to the same fostering protection which had enriched other parts of the country.

State over to the Republicans in 1888.
There is a strong anti-Cleveland sentiment in the State and the alleged "conspiracy" consists of a determination, it is said, on the part of the Democrats for once to give the Republicans an honest count, which means a Republican victory. We have long couten-jed that the South has only been held solid in the Democratic column by the most monumental fraud, but this is the first time we have seen it freely admitted in Democratic print. If an honest, count is regarded as a "conspiracy" it is confined to Louisana, but extend to other Southern States.

He had vamped "The next morning our American drove round to find him. If then he took ship for Yew York. So did we. In this way: Our American company was ready. Mr. Carte took them down to Liverpool in a special train, very quietly. They were taken on board in a special tender, and it is the first time we have seen it freely admitted in Democratic print. Official Investigation in Progress

Testimony of the Engineer.

White River Junction Vt. Feb. 7.
The official investigation into the circumstances connected with the milroad disaster, Saturday, began at the Junction House this afternoon. A large number of people, prominent throughout New England, are in attendance and the investigation was held under the immediate direction of the Railroad Commissioners of Vermont, consisting of ex-Gov. G. E. Pingree, of Hartford, chairman, Hon. H. Clark, of Ruland, and Hon. T. C. Fetcher, of St. Johnsbury. The first witness was Charles H. Pierce, the engineer, th riveight years old, living in White Eliver Junction. Been in the employ of the Central Vermont Road twenty-two years, fourteen as engineer, and has run all kinds of trains. He was engineer of the tight express last Friday night; made up here from trains arriving from Boston and Springfield.

present this afternoon at three o'clock at the Common Council room at a meeting of the committee appointed by the City Council to inquire what can be done or the part of the city to escourage manufacturing enterprises. There should be a large attendance, especially of those who have suggestions to offer of a practical nature. It is understood that among other propositions there is one looking to land, Wednesday, Feb. 16th, at 6.30 P. and he received a poor education. He was regarded by his neighbors as blasphenious and licentious, but was not so bad as he was represented. Bunyan was an enthusiast and something of a fanatic and early became imbued with torment of soul. He saw God in everything and Heaven was real to him. He was harassed by dreams and visions and became very superstitious. He passed through a terrible struggle with himself and finally became master of himself, left image of Christ and became a preacher. He spoke to the souls of men and an instance is given where 3,000 Londoners arose from their beds to hear him one bit-

Cherry Pectoral, properson tered, affords speedy relief and curse. As a remedy for Whooping Cough, with which many of our children were afflicted, we used, dur of the past winter, with much sattifaction, varieform the preparation of the most efficacious of all the medicines which have come, to our knowledge—Mary Parkhunt, Preceptress, Home for Little Wanteren, Doncaster, Md.

My children have been peculiarly subject to attacks of Croup, and I failed to find any effective remedy until I commenced administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This preparation relieves the difficulty of breathing and invariably cutes the complaint.—David G Starks, Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y.

CHAPTER III.

"I am tired to-day," say: Millicent, with a little, pretty, weary gesture, third in the little of an above her head and langhing softly "And idla, too I shan't do any serman, so yn may as well sit down and gessip with me, in stead."

"But"— begins Nadine feeblv She is plainly delighted at the chance of scamping the German.

"I've told ath the I'm going to look at a book to day, so you may rest yourself in that chair with a quite soul. I wouldn't be as conscientious is you, Nadine for a king! snasom. Not that that yould be much lowadays, with a littless Nililistic doctrans gaining ground as they do Are you comfortable in that overgrown chair? You look a trifte lost."

"I am quite bapy;" says Nilins, with a sigh of content. She is feeling tagged and nervons and is glad to rest in Killicent's I retty room with no chance (I being allowed the move for, an hour a' least. "Licky you!" says Miss Grey drepping down upon the hearth rug and tax ng her knees lito her embrace. It is only April yet, and very chilly "I'm 1 I Oh, yes, I know! You needn't finish what is on the tip of your tongue I have everything the hearth of girl can desire—the best of sunts, pleuty of money, a skason before me (a first one too), a lover, and pristy much my own way—and still I am not happy! I say, isn't it a shame keeping me at my lessons when in another month! I shall be eighteen, and presented, and all the rest of it?"

"Well I certainly think they might as well have let you off the month." I shall be dighteen, and presented, and all the rest of it?"

"Well I certainly think they might as well have let you off the month." I shall be dighteen any entired. "She is, there isn't a doubt of it," declares Miss Grey, who likes to hear her annite praised "But, like the rest of us, she has her little weaknesses. Well, never mind. I care say there are more unpardonable things in the world than M 'Liere and Professor Vere tt will become mey"

'Ah: probably I shan't see, says Na

'Ah: probably I shan't see, says Na dine.

Quick tears rise in her eyes. It is not only that the loss of her engagement will be a serious lessening of the grist she brings to the pull, but she is food of Milicent, and to lose her—the pre ty, saucy, kindly friend—that seems very bitter. "Won't you, though? What do you mean by that I shall disappear with mousleur and the processor when you step upon the world's stage."

Miss Grey bringing herself nimbly to her feet drags? hadne from her hair, and compels her to stade in front of her 'Now that I has brought matters to the governed point—now for he stage effect," she says nirtly. 'You see, we are both very stagey in our syntiments to day. Now, list no my arrungement and he warned in time that if you object to it murder (will be done—he e, in this very quiet from in Park lane. Auntle is of opinion that I im unfit to go about without a keeper and you are o be appointed such. See's According to annie you are a very mode of propriet; and I am exactly the reviews. You are to take me in hand, and make me altogother such a often as thyself."

"Oh Millicent"—impossible! I could not do that."

"Ard why, then? What a tone! what a volce. Is it it possible you are go go to

"And why, then? What a tene! what a voice Is it possible you are go ug to

A quick flash rising to Nadice's brow dyes her face crimson. You are going to be married! says Millicent quickly noting the signal of

It is true-yes '

And you never told me." There is a strong repreach in her tone. Them—see ing the pullor on the face before her (the strange sorrowful whitening of the sean tiful nece), that has chased from it the nawilling roses of a moment since—and as site marks the mournful drooping of the libs and the look of terrible depression, may, fear, that betrays itself in the shrinking form—pity overcomes her sense of ill usage and some sharp neer sense of ill usa And you never told me " There is quick shudder, "I know then that my thought is vain'

"Remance is dead!" declares diss
Grey "Handsome as an Apello, and poor, and yet you cannot be touched with the sternal fire. Fie upon you, hen you degenerate girl! After all"—with a sud den change of tone from the relodramatic into! The distinctly common place—'you are just like me. My young man (phrase borrowed from Mary June, you will perceive) is quite all you Lave described yours to be—harring the low crty—and you? I like him quite as little as you do yours?"

"My dear Millicent! And I always understood that!"— "It was to be a true love match. A very ideal marriage! A veritable cosing affair! Disabuse your mind of the at once, my good girl. It is a match loved, but by no body clse, so far as I can see He is to have me and author's mone!, I am to have him and his manning since, it is to have him and his manning since, it is to have him and his manning since in the law of the second with such a some sround one's neck and expected to enjoy one's self!"

"Paul Annerley" "Paul Annerley"

"A masterful name—nearly as bad as Granit Boyle—that sounds like the resistless rock as the wave bests hopelessly against it" She pauses as though's unk in a light reverie. "I rm not a hopeless wave, however," she continues presently, her pause being so slight as to be almost imperceptible "A rock myself, rather Yet I look so frail—so fragile!" She gets up and turns to a mirror, land pushing back the soft silky hair from her low brow examines her face critically "Yes—a rock! she says decisively 'So, if my dear cousin does not improve on ac quaintance, I warn him I shall not be dragged to the altar to suit his whim I'd cut off my hair first! It was by the hair the mediawal parent dragged his child, sh?" she asks, turning to Nadine with a sudden smile

"It believe you like your cousin, under it all says Nadine langhing

"Well, I do and I don t, as I have al ready said Just now, I don't But there are few men in town so handsome So much I know, though I have not as yet come out."

'He is tall, dark earne it in expression That is disappointing I know, the mod ern villain being always tail fair, inson ciant But—varjety is charming My villain is as I have said."

Paul is dark too," says Nadine arch ing her brows Ifal So The plot thickens! Two villains in one drama is extravagant I wish however Paul had been of the fair, die away order if only to make a diversion Nadine, tell me, why are you going to marry your unloved villain!"

'He isn't a villain," begins Nadine, but Millient interrupts her way word for it. Well go on "I am marrylle him becaus—because I think I do like him, and thatmy absurd repuision when absent from him is a mean feeling only to be conquered to dis appear forever. And—and imamma will be happy if I marry, bird. She is so afraid that I may ever come to real want."

'He is rich then' A man of property."

No He has a clerkship somewhere in the city."

I cannot say enough to express my gratitude for this won lerville ever by the Caticura Remedies and wish all similarly afflicted to know that my statement is true and without over gration.

CHARLES MCKAY Peabody Mass Oct 6 1885
I have seen Mr McKay s boy when badly and focted with the Mczema. He was a pitiful sight to look at 1 know he has tried our best physicians and fill all a futher could do for a suffering chil 1 but availed nothing. I know that the statements he has made you are regards the earing of his boy by your Cutteura Remedies are true in every pur il ular.
